It takes a village: Christmas in Glasford

By Brody M. and Meadow M.
News Reporters

Christmas spirit in the Glasford area doesn't happen on its own; months of planning go into it. Everyone involved in the process must follow through with their crucial roles, since many steps have to happen before the full Christmas effect can be seen.

The kick-off to the spirit typically starts with the Illini Bluffs school district on Oct. 31, with their meeting for the food drive baskets. Feeding those in need throughout our community is the first step in preparing everyone for the holiday season.

All of Illini Bluffs plays a role in collecting items. The elementary students have a week to bring in as many Jell-O boxes as they can; the middle school students have a jar for each grade to put money into, and whichever grade raises the most money wins; and the high school students have a canned food drive, each grade racing to get the desired items before the other grades do.

Roughly around 10,000 items raised during this time will be delivered to the American Legion by the National Honor Society.

"We help with delivery, and we load everything up into trailers. We take it down to the legion. Unload and sort the food as well," National Honor Society Coordinator Mrs. Roderick, said.

Later on, after everything is sorted and ready for delivery, the boys' basketball team comes into play by delivering the baskets to the families.

Up at the top of the hill, a lot goes into decorating the town, including the 'Happy Holidays' sign, the memorial wreaths, and the lights throughout the town and along Main Street, all of which are installed by Keith Reimer and Tammy Stetler, the village treasurer.

"I have to maintain the Christmas lights. We decorate some of the park, and make the wreaths that someone can buy in memory of someone. [Tammy] and I have been doing this for probably 25 years or more," Keith Reimer said.

The effort that is put into decorating for the holidays is noticed by everyone. It truly plays a factor in being a part of the Glasford community during the Christmas season.

"Glasford's show of Christmas spirit through their 'Happy Holidays' sign, along with their other festive decorations, brings me immense joy and incites a sense of holiday cheer in me," junior Addy D. said.

The Glasford community is not the only one getting ready for the holiday season. Lake Camelot is also getting into the spirit with the Santa Breakfast led by Kindra Bruninga.

"I started volunteering with the Lake Camelot Activities Club Breakfast with Santa approximately five years ago. In the last two years, I took over leading the breakfast with Santa, which is the responsibility of overseeing everything and providing for a successful morning," Bruninga said. "Breakfast with Santa allows the community to come together to celebrate the magic of Christmas. It allows our children to delight in a morning of happiness."

The "Happy Holidays" sign hangs over Main Street as captured by Cora E.

Annual tradition: Teel's class helps students make ornaments

By Tyler H.
News Reporter

In the few weeks before Illini Bluffs leaves for Christmas break, Mr. Teel hosts the fourth graders in his room, so they can make ornaments to bring home to their parents to hang on the tree.

The first task at hand for the building and construction class is to find the bleacher boards, cut them to the right width and plane them down to the correct thickness.

Next, the fourth-grade class then draws out their design on the slab of wood, where they then take it over to the bandsaw—with the help of a construction class member— they then cut them out.

After the kids cut their tree out, they have to come back into the classroom, grab a piece of sandpaper and round the edges down to make them more friendly to handle. Everyone in the class is expected to help.

"This is good for the kids; it gets them exposed to the different aspects of the shop and gets them hands-on experience that they may not have had before," Mr. Teel said.

This experience teaches both the Highschoolers and kids important life lessons, like working together and strengthening woodworking skills, while creating a special memory they will have for years to come.

Weather whys: Snow tornadoes

By Ella D.
News Reporter

Have you ever wondered if there could be a tornado while it is snowing? Well, yes, there can, but they are even more rare than you would think.

A snow tornado is a column of spinning air that forms from a strong thunderstorm environment with below freezing temperatures. This type of thunderstorm is usually in a snow squall. What is a snow squall you might ask? A snow squall is an intense period of moderate to heavy snow that lasts less than one hour.

Snow tornadoes are also commonly confused with Snow Devils which are Dust Devils, but with snow. These are created by a column of air that spins loose snow on the ground creating a tornado like look. Snow devils are generally harmless and don't cause much damage.

This given, snow tornadoes are very rare like previously mentioned, with only four ever being recorded in Ontario, Navajo nation, Scotland, and Greece. The one that occurred in Ontario is the strongest on record with 90 mph winds, classifying it as an EF-1 and causing minimal damage to areas it hit.

Now that we know the facts and what these rare phenomena, called snow tornadoes, are I hope you have learned something new and have found a motivation to learn about things that spark your curiosity in your heart no matter what they may be.

Fourth graders work on their ornaments.

Staff Picks: Holiday tradition

By Staff

With Christmas right around the corner, our staff has put together a list of their favorite holiday traditions for you to get inspiration from and enjoy. From White Elephant gifts, to decorating the Christmas tree, our staff is excited to share their perspectives on their favorite traditions!

White Elephant - Emma H.

I've done it every year at my great-grandmas house. White Elephant is where you get a bunch of people together, each person brings gifts and everybody gets a number between one and the amount of people there. We usually start last, because my great grandmas getting older. It's a great tradition, and I love that it brings everyone together.

Peoria Festival of Lights - Anna C.

My family has held this tradition for a while. It first started when we found ourselves bored on a perfectly snowy evening and were looking for something festive to entertain ourselves with. The Festival of Lights popped up on my mom's Facebook page, and we took a drive out to see what the fuss was about. The journey through the Christmas exhibit is a long, but eye-catching one. My favorite thing about the whole thing is that all the lights are coordinated to dance along to a radio station that plays Christmas music. It's the perfect event to sit back and immerse yourself in.

Christmas Tree Decorating - Addie S.

I don't know exactly how long we've done it as a family, but it's been since I was a kid at least. It started as just a way to get everyone together for a night to spend time decorating the christmas tree. I like that I get to help add my own touches on the tree and choose what ornament I like to be on the front side of the tree.

'Jack Frost' sweeps Glasford's roads: Who got hit the worst

By Jaclyn Y.
Voice Reporter

We've all driven on a road and thought to ourselves, "Man, this road is rough." The roads may be bad, but during the winter, they're even worse. Driving can be one of the most hazardous aspects of winter, given that ice and snow collect on the road, making it hazardous and slick to travel for day-to-day activities. Some don't only have to worry about a bumpy ride on main roads around town, but an even more dangerous aspect of the winter hazards, driving down hills, specifically Glasford Hill. Many hills can be deadly, causing people to skid down hills without control, leading to cars in deep ditches or off into the woods to go into oncoming traffic where others have no way to stop. Not only that, but Route 24, a highway outside of Glasford, is also known for its dangers, with overpasses freezing and cars driving at high speeds, it is a recipe for disaster. Then, when you add the aspect of deer, the situation becomes an even larger nightmare.

Roads in Glasford and surrounding areas may be on the uptrend, though, with recently being redone this past summer, leading to fewer potholes and smoother rides, but even the smoothest roads can be hazardous when it comes to winter weather.

Staff Picks: Holiday song suggestions to add to your playlist

By Staff

"All I Want For Christmas Is You" - Mariah Carey

By Addy D.
Editor-in-Chief

I think that it is truly an immaculate encapsulation of the holiday vibe. By mixing romance with holiday cheer, it hits all the right places and leaves you filled with the yearning Christmas spirit. It is an absolutely necessary addition to ANY holiday playlist.

"Christmas Tree Farm" - Taylor Swift

By Ella D.
News Editor

I love this song because it is just really fun to sing along to in the car. This song is newer, while still serving the effect of a nostalgic Christmas song that many newer Christmas songs lack. Making them, in my opinion, not as good.

"Mistletoe" - Justin Bieber

By Serina S.
Copy Editor

I think "Mistletoe," by Justin Bieber, reflects a perfect Christmas vibe. The beat of the song and the words come together so well. I also don't think this song is overwhelmingly festive. I believe it is the best song for a holiday vibe.

"Jingle Bell Rock" - Bobby Helms

By Rowan G.
Voice Reporter

Jingle Bell Rock is a timeless classic, it's got rock and roll energy, and traditional Christmas sounds. It's appealing to everyone, it's about having fun and dancing. It's my personal favorite song to hear at Christmas and always puts me in a good mood.

Best Roblox games to binge over break

By Topher B.
Voice Reporter

If you play Roblox and are bored of playing the same games, here are five games that you should try out. All of these games can be played on pc, mobile, and console, and are easy to get into. These games are also good to play with friends or just by yourself.

The first game is for people who like free-for-all games that aren't super competitive; it's called "Blast Zone." This is a fighting game that mostly uses explosives. Players will be able to unlock and equip items like bats, hammers, boxing gloves, bombs and more crazy things like nukes and portal guns. The main goal of the game is to get eliminations. You can do this by throwing bombs at people, hitting people off the map, or using the melee weapons to hit bombs into other players. There are a variety of maps to play on, and matches will last about 10-15 minutes, making it great if you have a little bit of free time. This game is simple and somewhat competitive; it's pretty fun if you want to try out a fighting game.

This next game is a cozy tycoon and is similar to Hayday with small elements of Factorio-style automation. "Overfarmed" is a game where you and your friends can gradually progress by growing and selling crops. You start with a 1x1 tile, and you can buy more land to expand. You can sell your crops or use them to create other products. For example, you can turn wheat into bread by combining water and flour; you make this by using a mill and a water pump. You can eventually automate these processes and expand further by purchasing new areas and discovering more things.

Scrumptious Christmas desserts

By Ashlyn F.
Voice Reporter

The holiday season is about a variety of things, such as spending time with loved ones, indulging in delicious Christmas desserts and celebrating traditions. It is a time filled with the warmth of twinkling lights or the fireplace, exchanging gifts, the jolly sounds of carols and the spirit of giving. From playing in the snow to decorating the tree, it is a season of togetherness and compassion.

This time of year is filled with many traditions, one of the most beloved being the enjoyment of festive desserts. These treats bring people together and create lasting memories. Today, we'll explore five popular goodies that are sure to bring joy and sweetness to your gatherings!

Pretzel Turtles

These are popular because they are easy to make with just a few ingredients, offer a popular salty-sweet flavor combination and are merry and giftable for the holidays. Their simplicity and taste makes them a perfect, kid-friendly activity and a hit at gatherings. Also, they're really customizable - you can use different types of chocolate, nuts, or even add sprinkles to add a better visual appearance!

Pumpkin Pie

Secondly comes pumpkin pie, coming in with its seasonal spices such as cinnamon, nutmeg and allspice. It is a strong association with the broader holiday season that extends from Thanksgiving to Christmas. This delightful treat is also a festive favorite for its historical association with the fall harvest and the festive flavors of autumn spices.

Sugar Cookies

Our first popular sweet of the season is iced sugar cookies. They are #1 on the list because of their classic sweetness, festive shapes, and fun-to-decorate nature, which incorporates the holiday spirit for many families. The basic dough is easy to roll and cut into countless shapes. This makes a "blank canvas" for various icings, frostings and sprinkles, allowing you to do endless creative expressions that increase the holiday feeling.

Cobbler

Cobbler is great for the season because they're warm, comforting and easy to make with seasonal fruits like apples or berries! They are super versatile, due to the different use of fruits, toppings and spices to customize them. Plus, they're a crowd pleaser and also pretty budget-friendly since you can use ingredients you already have on hand. And the best part? That warm, gooey goodness is the ultimate comfort food during the chilly Christmas season.

Fruit Fluff salad

This delightful treat is popular for Christmas because it is a creamy, sweet and adaptable dessert that is easy to prepare ahead of time. It is considered a classic holiday dish due to its customizable nature, which makes it perfect. Whether served as a side dish, or a sweet ending to the meal, fruit fluff salad is an enjoyable and refreshing treat that complements the heavier, more traditional Christmas cuisine.

In conclusion, the holidays are a time of joy, togetherness and delicious treats. From the classic sweetness of sugar cookies to fruit fluff salad, these five desserts offer a lovely way to celebrate the season. Each treat brings its own unique flavor and charm, contributing to the festive spirit and creating long lasting memories.

Christmas in Peoria over the decades

By Lillian K.
Voice Reporter

The anticipation of a long day of waiting for the mail truck to hit your road to deliver the Christmas catalogs has been a feeling that has been around for decades. While certain staples like these magazines have been around for decades, so have Christmas traditions in the beloved city of Peoria, Illinois.

In the late 1880's the Santa Claus Parade brought much attention and traffic to the streets. The parade is the longest-running Santa Claus Parade in the country. At the start of the planning, it started with the construction on the Upper Free Bridge over the Illinois River; Boats and Derricks carrying 50 stonemasons formed the parade that came down the river from Chillicothe, IL. Allegedly, the parade earned its name when the Jolly Old Elf himself came down the river on one of the boats.

Today, the parade is still around; however, it no longer occurs with boats down the river. The parade makes its way down the streets of Downtown Peoria. It ends its route when Mr. and Mrs. Claus make their way into town. They are ushered by around 60 costumed characters, marching bands and decorated floats. As of this year, it was the parade's 138th year in attendance.

To light up the town, The Festival of Lights was started in 1984, and there has never been a light show parade in Central Illinois, so this was a first.

In the 80s, the parade floats were mostly constructed of wood, wrapped with chicken wire and covered with spray foam. One of the most memorable floats that was put together was the Hendrick's Star, which was put together for one of the festival volunteers, Andrew Hendricks. From there, volunteers added lights to make the lights visible since the parade occurred at night.

In the first parade, there were a total of 19 floats, including seven large ones to represent popular Christmas carols, and 12 smaller floats escorted with walking costumed characters, scouts, school groups and business vehicles.

40 years later, the Hendrick's Star is still a part of the festival and is involved in many ways. The star shines over the city bluff in VFW Park. Recently, the light show was featured on season eight of ABC's "The Great Christmas Light Fight," winning in the Heavyweights division.

Holiday film on on one

By Emma H. and Narissa H.
Voice Reporters

When Ms. Sewell asked us to write this article, Narissa and I said, “You serious, Clark?” We have different opinions on movies, so it would be hard to agree on which one is the best. Therefore, we decided to pick different films that we thought were good, depending on the category we were debating.

Best classic Christmas movie

"Rudolph The Red-Nosed Reindeer"

I feel that "Rudolph" is the best Christmas movie of all time for many different reasons. Firstly, Rudolph is just a lovable character, and I haven't heard of anyone disliking this movie. Also, this movie was the first big piece of media to include the song “Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer,” which I think is pretty cool. The film Home Alone is very popular, but I don't think it's the best original Christmas movie. It's definitely something, though!

"Home Alone"

"Home Alone" stands out as the best original Christmas movie because it blends a heartfelt holiday spirit as well as comedy. Kevin, with his traps towards Marv and Harry, makes the movie funny and enjoyable to watch. Don't get me wrong, the original "Rudolph" movie is very good and enjoyable, but it just doesn't have the same comedic, enjoyable feeling or watchability to it. Even in 10 years, Home Alone will still be hilarious, no matter how many times you watch it, and people will still love it.

Best live-action Christmas movie

"Christmas Vacation"

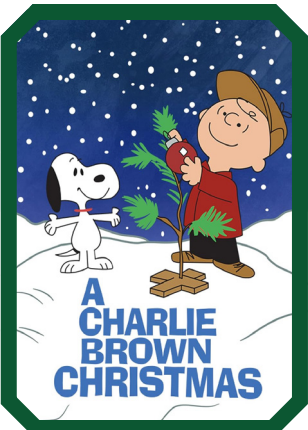

"Christmas Vacation" captures the chaos and humor of a real family during the holiday season, making it relatable and funny! "The Grinch" is a decent movie overall, it just doesn't have the same silly, uplifting vibe as "Christmas Vacation." This film is the perfect holiday comedy, with its quirky characters and memorable jokes.

"The Grinch"

It can be really hard to make real-life movies with things that aren't human or a regular animal. "The Grinch" isn't either of those, and he looks really good and realistic in the movie. Also, it gives characters deep backstories, and it is a very energetic movie while also being heartwarming, which makes it one of the best Christmas movies. "Christmas Vacation" is a good, funny movie, it's just not a movie that I would want to watch around christmas time.

Best animated Christmas movie

"A Charlie Brown Christmas"

This movie has been one of my favorites ever since I was a little kid. It offers a meaningful message about the true Christmas spirit and not just the fun and magic. Its simple animation makes it nostalgic and timeless, and the characters feel real and relatable. "Frosty the Snowman" is a very heartwarming film I will admit, but, with the timelessness of this film, it will never compare.

"Frosty the Snowman"

This movie is one of the Christmas classics with one of the most iconic Christmas songs. It is a timeless tale of a magical snowman's quest to stay alive, offering simple fun and a message about spreading happiness despite life's fleeting nature. "A Charlie Brown Christmas" is a good movie, but it just isn't doesn't give the appeal to young kids with simple magic, catchy songs and a quick, action-packed plot that "Frosty the Snowman" gives.

Best "Christmas movie that's not actually a Christmas movie"

"Terrifier 3"

"Terrifier 3" uses the holiday setting to create a dark, intense atmosphere that's not usually unexpected around this time of year, which is thrilling. While "Nightmare Before Christmas" whimsically blends Halloween and Christmas, "Terrifier 3" brings a twist by combining the festivities of the Christmas season with horror, making it a fresh and surprising experience.

"Nightmare Before Christmas"

It is a known dilemma on whether "The Nightmare Before Christmas" is a Halloween movie or a Christmas movie. The truth is that it is both. If you look up a list of Christmas movies and a list of Halloween movies, it will pop up on both lists. "Terrifier 3" isn't a bad movie, but when you think of Christmas movies, you don't think horror. "Terrifier 3" is a very gory and scary movie, which, although Art the clown wears a Christmas hat, it would still be considered as more of a horror movie.

Christmas in Peoria continued from P3

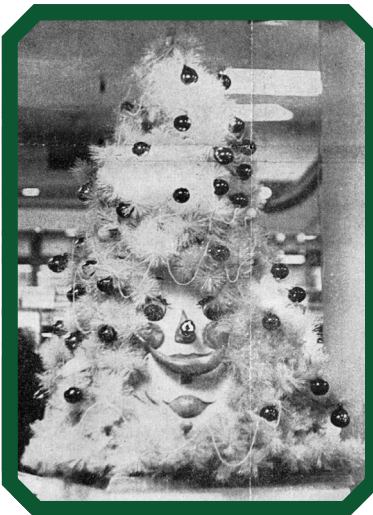

Today, after the parade occurs, the floats are taken up to the drive for visitors to admire, with over 41 floats.

Moving back to the 1900s decade... Bergner's in Sheridan Village brought attention to their store surface by surfacing a talking Christmas tree in 1966.

The tree was a white pyramid with white garland and colored ornaments. People were absolutely fascinated by the attraction and couldn't wait to make their yearly visit; however, when the tree was damaged in a flood for the second time, the idea was scrapped, and later on, Bergner's filed for bankruptcy. Today, the restored "talking tree" resides in Urban Artifacts for anyone interested in recapturing the nostalgia.

While we lost Bergner's, Bass Pro opened in 2011 bringing the Christmas spark back to the area. Each year, Santa makes his way to town by a parade, escorted by the fire department in his hot ride: a boat. Kids gather dressed up, anxiously waiting to meet him and his elves. The store also has many interactive components in its toy land, including games, toys and crafts for the children, bringing the true spark of Christmas back to the greater Peoria area!

Driving to my next chapter

By Kaylynn S.
Graphic Designer

I spend a lot of time driving. Whether that be to and from work or school or even taking my sisters everywhere they need to go. I like driving because it gives me a sense of freedom, and I love being able to blast my music and just seeing all the different scenery.

In my experience, driving and high school are a lot alike. They both have windy roads and some pot holes along the way and maybe sometimes it has some stops too. In school, you have more freedom, but you are in charge of your grades and make your own decisions.

Driving and school show you discipline and accountability. Roads have pot holes, they are windy and twisty and high school is the same way.

High school is the same way; you'll have some challenges, surprises, and unexpected and expected lessons. You will always get to your destination, though. Sometimes while driving you miss a turn and need to take a different route.

School is similar, there are moments when you make a mistake or take the long way around, but you still end up learning from it.

High school has taught me that, no matter what you go through, you will always get through it and that sometimes change is good. You will also gain friendships and sometimes lose them but either way you will be okay and get through it.

All these lessons will help get me through my next adventure. When I graduate high school in December, I will be starting college to become a school worker. That will be the next chapter of my life to learn new lessons, make new friendships and keep on driving.

Mixing it all together

By Ayden B.
Voice Reporter

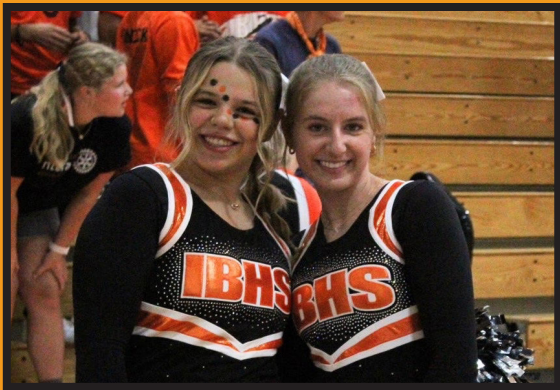

My hands are a mess, covered in raw beef and bread crumbs, as I mix the ingredients together. I mold the meatballs together. I can hear the sound of water sizzling and popping, and the steam floats out of the lid, feeling the warm heat near your hands, as I put the pasta in; there is nothing more frustrating than the anticipation for the food to be done. This is how I feel whenever I make my grandmother's pesto noodles, and I wouldn't trade it for anything in the world.

Growing up, I remember seeing my grandma cook all the time, and I was always beyond excited to try whatever dish she was cooking up. She made all the cookies, pies, drinks, all the hams, anything for any holiday she covered, and they were always delicious. When I got to freshman year, I became obsessed with cooking, and she made it her mission to teach me everything she knew. Every time I was over and she was cooking, she asked if I wanted to help. I always said yes, as time with her is worth more than any piece of money in the world.

I have made many of my grandmother's recipes in the last two years. My passion for cooking independently started after I learned how to cook, because oftentimes I was hungry in the mornings and wanted to make some food. I started slow and worked my way up, eventually making things like pesto meatballs, orange-glazed ham and many others. Although I have made many of her recipes, I have only scratched the surface of those books. Through cooking, you sharpen not only your cooking skills but also your personal qualities.

My grandmother always has been and always will be a huge part of my life. She inspires me to keep pushing and not stop. It's because of her that I keep growing and will continue to do so. She has backed me up since I was little, even when it was hard on her. I would never have become the man I am today without her.

Over the last four years of high school so far, I have learned one valuable thing: life is just like cooking. There are a lot of ingredients: having to work and save money, balancing school, work and home life. And sometimes, trying to balance it all gets messy, but everything in life happens for a reason. That being said, I wouldn't change it. Because, when you mix together everything you experienced and learned, you create something wonderful—just like pesto meatballs.

'Dancing through Life'

By Karrigan W.
Copy Editor

As the story goes, life is always better when you're "Dancing Through Life," but I've come to learn it's way better with a friend. Most friendships start in a pretty ordinary way—school, sports, or just living in the same neighborhood. But for me and Riley, our bond grew out of something a little different: dance. When I first joined the dance team, we weren't instantly inseparable or anything. We were friendly, but we mostly stayed within our own groups. It wasn't until we started practicing together day after day that everything began to shift.

Dance has a way of breaking down walls without you even noticing. At first, we were just helping each other clean up turns or laughing when someone messed up the timing during run-throughs. But, those small moments added up. Soon we were stretching together before practice, sharing snacks between routines and sending each other TikToks of dances we wanted to try. Without even trying, we became each other's person—the one we always gravitated toward.

The real turning point in our friendship has been our senior year. Something about knowing it's our last year together makes everything feel more meaningful. Practices are longer, home-game performances feel more important and every routine seems to matter a little more. We push each other harder than ever, but also support each other in a way that goes way beyond dance. When one of us is stressed, the other notices immediately. When one of us is tired or frustrated, the other steps in with a hug, a joke, or an extra burst of energy to get us through another run. As friends, when we are in the zone dancing, we are truly unlimited.

As we finish out our final season, I've realized that dance has taught us discipline and creativity, but more importantly, it's given me a friendship built on trust, support and a thousand shared memories. And honestly, I wouldn't trade any of it—not the sore muscles, the long practices, or even the stressful moments. At the end of "Wicked," they sing a song called "For Good." The lyrics say, "Who can say if I've been changed for the better? But, because I knew you. I have changed for good." Because I met my best friend Riley, I know I have been changed for the good AND for the better.

“Who’s lying?” This game is a fun and tricky game to play with your friends. There are two roles in this game: investigator and imposter. The investigators receive a secret word and have to describe it without saying what it is directly; the imposter has to try to blend in without knowing the word. After a round of everyone describing the word once, players will vote on who they think the imposter is. If they are correct, they will win but if they are wrong, the imposter wins. If you have a big group of friends, this will be a great game to play with them.

If you enjoy RPG games that require grinding and progression, you’ll like The Forge. Players mine ores, craft weapons and armor, and fight enemies across different zones. As you explore, you unlock more dangerous areas with rarer ores, some of which give special effects to the gear you craft. Crafting uses a skill-based forging minigame, and equipment can be enhanced with runes. Players can roll for different races with special buffs, fill out their index for bonus gold and XP, and complete quests for additional rewards. It’s a deep, satisfying RPG loop with a lot of progression.
